What is the Kofi Annan Fellowship all about?

The Kofi Annan Fellowship provides the opportunity for talented and motivated students from developing countries, who do not belong to a privileged class and lack sufficient financial means, to study management at ESMT in Berlin and graduate with a prestigious MBA from the most international business school in Germany.

Upon return to their home countries, the Fellows are expected to contribute to the strengthening of entrepreneurial capacity and the fostering of a stable market economy as an effective catalyst for their country's development, job creation, and poverty alleviation.

Wulff Plinke,
Founding Dean, ESMT

ESMT will scout for these talents, select them, provide preparation if needed; give fair compensation for expenses like travel, accommodation, and program fees; and guide the Fellows through their stay at the School. After graduation, ESMT will offer support to the Fellows in starting their new careers and building a network among the Kofi Annan alumni.

Under the umbrella of the Kofi Annan Business Schools Foundation, ESMT is joining forces with associated European business schools to create a scalable number of successful Kofi Annan Fellowships.

Your involvement would be highly appreciated.

Berlinda Mkanganwi

“December 16, 2011 had been a red-letter day on all our calendars since our arrival, marking the end of a journey officially launched in January 2011. I would like to share with you some insight on how this journey unfolded for us this year. Being an entrepreneurial leader requires three things: courage to try something new and push boundaries; resourcefulness in finding solutions; and stamina to do what needs doing.

Often leaders must go the extra mile for the defenseless and voiceless who cannot thank or repay. Henry Ford once said a business that makes nothing but money is a poor business. We learnt how seriously ESMT takes this during a business simulation. Working in teams, our goal was to run fishing businesses in a specific catchment area. We invested, traded, planned, and outsmarted each other. At the end, we made much money, but there were no fish left in the sea.

When I was young, my mother told me something that I believe explains why many of us came on this journey. She told me that I was born with my fists clenched because I was holding all the gifts that God had given me, and that my life’s job is to open my hands. There are two lessons in this: first, that each of us has unique gifts that come as seed to be nurtured. Second, that just as an apple tree bears apples not for itself but for others, these gifts are given to us but do not belong to us; they are meant for others.”

From the graduation speech of Berlinda Mkanganwi, Kofi Annan Fellow and ESMT MBA graduate 2011

Ernest Kwame Gyimah

“Before we first met at ESMT for the official opening of January 12, 2012, we made arrangements and met for dinner to introduce ourselves and to share our aspirations for what was to become an eventful year for us. Coming from 24 countries, our hopes and expectations for the year had indeed cut across many spheres. We had hoped to make new and lasting friends, further develop our technical expertise, expand our professional networks, experience Berlin and Germany, and take advantage of our MBA degree to change jobs and locations, among others. With all these, we aspired to become responsible and integrative leaders. That is, to be leaders who unite the numerous perspectives required for an organization to grow.

Looking back, we feel proud of what we have been able to achieve in this year at ESMT. Nonetheless, as we join the ESMT alumni and reach out to a broader world, we are aware of the expectations all of you seated here have of us. We celebrate our day bearing in mind that you expect that we become leaders who know how to spot opportunities, share their vision, mobilize all the stakeholders’ energy behind that vision, and elicit their support through fair, responsible, and innovative leadership. We promise not to disappoint you.”

From the graduation speech of Ernest Kwame Gyimah, Kofi Annan Fellow and ESMT MBA graduate 2012

Request for financial support

ESMT supports the Kofi Annan Fellowship initiative because the expected value for the Fellows is of the highest relevance. It will make a significant contribution to those countries that need effective support most. This initiative fits perfectly to ESMT's values and services.

ESMT will educate up to three students with every class. The Fellows will connect with the other students in the class. The class will profit greatly from the Kofi Annan Fellows – by learning from their perspectives and values when solving managerial issues, thus strengthening the awareness for responsibility in leadership. The catalytic effects will be strong. In addition, the Fellows will connect with Kofi Annan Fellows of other schools in the Foundation. After a few years, there will be a network of alumni Fellows, who will support each other by exchanging experiences and knowledge and gain mutual benefits from each other and from the schools in the Foundation.

ESMT needs the support of donors and sponsors for this charity initiative. Our proposition is that ESMT gives a full scholarship, i.e., does not charge any tuition to the Fellow. The School should not incur additional expenses for an individual Fellow. The marginal (direct) costs for this program are requested to be sponsored by social responsibility initiatives.
